MOB KILLING
OF JAPANESETokio Orders Gunboat Into
Chinese Waters to Investigate Serious IncidentDISAGREEMENT ADDS
TO COMPLICATIONSTOKIO, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Japanese gunboat Saga, the Navy Office announced today, will be dispatched to Pukhoo to investigate the reported "mob killing" of a Japanese citizen there.

The 685-ton warship left Hongkong last night for Canton to take aboard Japanese consular officials who will investigate the killing with Chinese officials, the Navy Office said.

WITH GRAVE CONCERN

Vernacular newspapers reported the Tokio Foreign Office viewed the reported incident with grave concern. The gunboat was sent because larger warcraft could not enter the shallow port of Akko.

ADDS COMPLICATIONS

SHANGHAI, Sept. 8 (AP)—Disagreement between Chinese and Japanese officials over the admissibility of sending a party of Japanese to Pukhoo to investigate an alleged "mob killing" there tonight threatened further to complicate the reported incident.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported the death of Junzo Nakano at Pukhoo; allegedly at the hands of Chinese demonstrators.

PROVISIONAL BOARD

A provisional board was set up last fall and immediately took over jurisdiction of the ports of Halifax, Saint John, Chicoutimi, Quebec, Three Rivers, Montreal and Vancouver. The harbor commissions existing at those ports were abolished and replaced by local management.

H. E. A. Hawken, assistant deputy minister of marine, with Colonel Dubuc and Mr. Roberts, carried on the provisional board, but Mr. Hawken died suddenly a few weeks ago. The two board members will now be relieved of their other duties and devote full time to administration of national port facilities.

Three members will receive salaries of $10,000. Mr. Campiney will be chairman and representative of Western Canada; Colonel Dubuc, a native of Montreal, vice-

Dill, newly-appointed commander-in-chief of British troops in the Holy Land, left today for Marseilles, whence he will sail to Haifa on the destroyer Douglas. Fifteen thousand troops will follow him shortly, doubling the British military force in Palestine.BOARD WILL BE NATIONALTo Replace Individual Harbor Commissions at Canadian Ports

OTTAWA, Sept. 8 (CP)—Completing a move initiated soon after taking office last October, the Government today appointed a permanent National Harbor Board, which will have jurisdiction over principal Canadian ports in place of the individual harbor commissions formerly existing.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced tonight that Ralph Campiney, one-time member of his own secretarial staff, and now a lawyer in Vancouver, has been named chairman of the board. Colonel A. E. Dubuc, chief engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals and B. J. Roberts, assistant deputy minister of finance, were named members of the three-man board.

DELEGATES TO
LEAGUE NAMEDPrime Minister to Head
Canadian Representation
At Geneva Session

OTTAWA, Sept. 8 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate, and Labor Minister Norman Rogers will be Canada's official delegates to the forthcoming session of the League of Nations. Dr. O. Skeaton, Under-Secretary for External Affairs, and Dr. W. A. Riddell, permanent advisory officer at Geneva, will alternate delegates.

In making this announcement tonight the Prime Minister said that because of the importance of this League session, and the great responsibility attaching to anything that might be done there, he had decided agains having delegates other than those responsible for the Government or its administration.

EXPERT ADVISER

Col. G. P. Vanier, a member of the staff of the Canadian High Commissioner in London, will accompany the party to Geneva as expert adviser.

Leaving Ottawa Friday night the Canadian delegation will sail from Quebec Saturday. They will disembark at Cherbourg and go direct to Geneva by way of Paris, hoping to reach the destination September 1. The League session, which was to be opened, was to be suspended, and the organization of the League was to be discussed, opens September 21.

Mr. Mackenzie King anticipates an absence of six weeks or more, at the conclusion of the sessions in Geneva he will return via London where some time will be spent in conference with Government officials of the United Kingdom.

MEET DEATH BY
SPLIT SECONDSix Persons Killed by Train
At Level Crossing in Quebec

SCOTSTOWN, Que., Sept. 8 (CP)—Six lives would have been saved had Le Tréhain's automobile stopped a split second sooner, a coroner's jury heard today from witnesses who saw a train sweep four men and a woman and child to death yesterday at McLeod's Crossing, Quebec. The coroner, in summing up the inquest, found a verdict of accidental death after learning how the automobile carrying seven persons had rolled almost to a dead halt by the track four miles from here as the freight's width blew for the crossing.

Eye-witnesses, Dominic Young and Miss Jeanne Gervais, said that as the car from St. Leon, Que., came to a virtual standstill, its front end projected slightly into the path of the train. As the driver accelerated it to clear the tracks, its burst of speed carried it squarely into the path of the Canadian Pacific Railway mixed load, drawn from Miramic, Que., to Sherbrooke, Que.

In making this announcement tonight the Prime Minister said that because of the importance of this League session, and the great responsibility attaching to anything that might be done there, he had decided agains having delegates other than those responsible for the Government or its administration.

Intelligent Use of Ballot Chief Means Of Winning Freedom

President P. M. Draper of Trades and Labor Congress Advises Canadian Working Men—Minister of Labor Promises Sympathy.

MONTREAL, Sept. 8 (C)—Canadian working men can win economic freedom without firing a shot if they build up their organizations and use the ballot intelligently, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was told today by P. M. Draper, of Ottawa, its president, at the fifty-second annual convention of the congress opened.

The convention got down to business with 203 resolutions forwarded by local and affiliated bodies, after an opening speech by Mr. Draper in which he held progress along constitutional lines preferable to revolutionary or disruptive propaganda.

MINISTER'S ASSURANCE

From Hon. Norman Rogers, Federal Minister of Labor, the congress received an assurance the Government would listen to its representatives with a sympathetic ear. He said: "The working men between the Government and organized labor were the best assurance of sound government and social progress in a democratic state."

"Our Government should provide by law that all employees have the right to organize for their own protection," said Mr. Draper. "This was done temporarily during the war. It experienced worker, without the consent of the Minimum Wage Board."

TARIFF CRITICIZED

Inclusion of all workers in protected industries under the Dominion Minimum Wage Act is objected to as being "a waste of time." The workers had been of advantage to manufacturers only and had brought no corresponding benefit to workers and consumers.

Approval of the closing of the relief camps was expressed, combined with a protest against the use of former camp workers in a form of forced labor to do work covered by a schedule rate of pay, said work now being done by camp workers at a much smaller rate of remuneration."

Inclusion of boys under nineteen years of age, and domestic servants, in the Ontario Minimum Wage Act, were requested, while other resolutions approved without opposition.

MANY TOPICS

Resolutions passed dealt with banking, constitutional amendments, minimum wages and other topics.

An increase in the currency issue to make it more in keeping with the "wealth and resources of our country, developed and otherwise," was passed in a resolution passed. The motion said the Government should take complete ownership of the Central Bank in order to carry out this policy.

London Railway Carmen secured adoption of a resolution that house building and public works should be financed with new currency. Montreal Trades and Labor Council urged national control of the banking system, and the convention agreed.

Widening the scope of the Farm Security Amendment Act to make it applicable to city dwellers living in their own homes, was the substance of another resolution passed.

A proposal to make homes valued at less than $2,000 exempt from municipal taxes, was frowned upon, however, and was rejected after a brief debate.

AMENDMENTS DEMANDED

Amendments to the British North America Act were demanded in another resolution passed. The act was said to be obsolete and to have failed to be useful. The executive of the congress was instructed to ask the government to demand to have the law amended to "make the Government supreme."

The resolution said legislation for the benefit of the people had from time to time been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of Canada.

After a sharp debate, in which employers evading the minimum wage laws were scored, a motion was carried to urge the Ontario Government to amend the Minimum Wage Act to provide that "no girl's services may be dispensed with simply because she has become an

Adult Education In B.C. Topic of Conference Here

British Columbia Library Association Celebrates Twenty-Fifth Anniversary With One-Day Convention—Guest Speakers are Dr. Sedgwick and Dr. Rickard

ENTRING on the theme of adult education, addresses and discussions at the annual convention of the British Columbia Library Association held here on Monday were highly appropriate to the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the organization.

Principal speakers included Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, provincial archivist and librarian, who took the conference theme of "Adult Education" as his subject; Dr. T. A. Rickard, A.R.S.M., D.Sc., who spoke at the luncheon meeting at the Empress Hotel; Dr. O. O. Sedgwick, professor of literature at the University of British Columbia, who was the guest-speaker at the anniversary dinner in the evening, his subject being "1857-1936: the Modern Element in Literature"; and Robert England, who spoke on some of the practical issues of adult education at the place of the library therein.

Herb K. Kline, author of the twenty-five-year activities of the association, under the title of "Looking Backward," was read by John Ridington, president of the Canadian Library Council.

PRINCIPLES CONVERGE

In his thoughtful address, Dr. Sedgwick, speaking at the Empress Hotel, faced the fact that there were definite modern trends. He used as a pointed illustration the relationship existing between Catholicism and Communism. Although nominally and traditionally at the opposite ends of the poles of thought, these two had in common the brotherhood of man as their objective. Communists worked on the basis that man was the end in itself; Catholicism placed its faith in the unseen and the mystical; but both were, in the final analysis, working toward the same goal.

Dr. Sedgwick embraced, under the heading of "The Modern Element in Literature," the period from 1857 to 1936. Matthew Arnold had maintained that complete comprehension of the full life of any period in history was modernism, and Dr. Sedgwick held that, in these terms, complete comprehension was as much lacking in Arnold's time as in this present. Democracy had gone a long way forward since Arnold's day.

BOOKS AND READERS

A most erudite talk on the enjoyment of words was given by Dr. Rickard at the luncheon gathering.

"Book," he informed his audience, came from "boc," meaning birch tree; "volum" had the same root as "veal"; "tracing back to the origin of the parchment prepared from calf-skin. He also told something of the history of books and printing, beginning with the Babylonians and Egyptians; and gave some interesting facts about the contents of the British Museum in Paris, with its 4,500,000 volumes, and the British Museum Library, with its sixty-four miles of book-filled shelves.

Dr. Kaye Lamb, who spoke at the opening of the afternoon session, emphasized certain points about the forming of a reading public and the selection of books. Supply of books ought to be secondary to supply of education; he maintained, in speaking of the ideal in library service. Having to supply books to three classes of readers made educational

Lord Elibank to Address Luncheon Gathering Today

ORD Elibank, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the British Empire, will address a joint luncheon gathering of the Men's Canadian Club, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Victoria Club in the Empress Hotel today at 12:15 p.m. Members of the Rotary and Gyro clubs are also invited to attend. It is expected that Lord Elibank will touch upon Empire affairs during his discourse.

NEED CO-OPERATION

He also urged that greater co-operation be sought between libraries and those engaged in the drawing up of adult education programmes.

It was not of much use to quote the large circulation of books in any given place. More important was "What kind of books? What kind of borrowers?" said S. Robinson, librarian of the Vancouver Public Library. In opening the discussion on "Adult Education," John Ridington, of the University of British Columbia Library, claimed that professional educationalists closed their eyes too much to the part of libraries in any educational system; and Miss J. C. Stockwell, of the Vancouver Public Library, pointed to the need for educational library work in Oakalla Prison Farm and other institutions of the province.

OTHER BUSINESS

The morning session was partly taken up with registration; greetings from Mrs. Margaret Clay, of the Victoria Public Library; Mrs. Lucy M. Lewis, president of the P.N.L.A.; John Ridington, president of the Canadian Library Council; Carl Milam, American Library Association; and Norman Lidster, of the Public Library Commission.

There also were reports of the secretary, Miss Dorothy Hay; the treasurer, Miss Adelaide Pearson; standing committees; and a short report of the year's work by the president, Miss McAlister.

At the luncheon, when the board of trustees of the Victoria Public Library were the hosts, with Rev. Robert Connell, M.P.P., in the chair. Mayor Leeming brought greetings from the city of Victoria.

Afternoon session brought the report of the Bibliography committee prepared by Miss McAfee.

OPPOSITION TO BE SPLIT

Government May Insist Upon Ballot-Designation Of Members

In so far as the Government is concerned, Rev. Robert Connell, M.P.P., believes that the Opposition in the British Columbia legislature, and likely to remain so.

Premier Patullo clarified this point yesterday in a significant statement which will affect all ranks of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

"Mr. Connell is recognized as leading the Opposition, and will continue to be so recognized until for any reason he is displaced through representations from the Opposition itself. I have had no intimation he is not leading the Opposition."

The Premier explained that from the Government's standpoint, members sit in the House in the capacity in which they were elected. That is, the seven C.C.F. members are C.C.F. still; while the balance of the thirteen members of the Opposition include one Unionist, two Non-Partisans, two Independents and one Laborite.

AS ON BALLOTS

Any efforts by conservative-minded members to coalesce into a Conservative Opposition may be met from the Government side by instructions to resign and seek seats as Conservative members. The C.C.F. are to be considered as a unit; as elected, which may prove slightly embarrassing to three members of the party who have been expelled by their provincial organization.

Just how far this view of the situation will be endorsed by Mr. Speaker and by the ranks of the combined Opposition, it remains to be seen. If the Government holds to the ballot-designation of members there will not be a single Conservative in the House.

ISSUE UNSETTLED

The Opposition may drop party labels for the moment and caucus the question of leadership, which might give another development. Probably only the season itself can settle the issue, finally.

A remuneration of $3,200 in a normal year goes to the opposition leader in a British Columbia Legislature.

The Government manoeuvre appeared aimed at keeping its political enemies divided, while the administration retains a solid block of thirty-five seats in the House.

The only fly in the diplomatic ointment was Portugal's disinclination to participate despite Great Britain's offer to send a diplomatic mission which would make no effort to mediate the conflict. Some observers feared Portugal's absence might be a barrier to the committee's purposes, evolved carefully by Britain and France to create a solid front of neutrality.

No official list of representatives who will sit on the committee was issued but it was considered probable that diplomatic envoys in London would be named.

Among the committee's first undertakings, it was said, would be an exchange of information on the steps each power has taken to end non-intervention and an attempt to determine whether any arms shipments to Spain have evaded embargoes.

TO ATTACK STRONGHOLD

MADRID Sept. 8 (T)—The Madrid Government, in the face of reports its forces were being steadily vanquished in the northern coastal sector, tonight laid plans for an artillery and airplane attack on the rebel stronghold of Oviedo.

THE TOURIST SEASON

Good weather, gradual emergence from depressed economic conditions, and the result of excellent publicity work which has been extended over the years, all contributed to this city and the Island as a whole enjoying a remarkably successful tourist season. The probability is that there were more visitors by actual count than during the 1929 season, the year which is usually pointed to for purposes of comparison. In any case, because of the influx of tourists, large sums of money have flowed into the coffers of the business interests here, and an impetus of a definite character has been given to trade.

The City and the Island have benefitted handsomely and have every reason for thankfulness that a steady policy of publicity has been pursued through the lean and fat years. That policy, as time elapses, is having cumulative results which are valuable to the people as a whole. The steady, progressive and ever-expanding efforts of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau have been fully justified, and that organization may well regard itself as a public asset which has meant a good deal to the growth of the community.

It must be remembered that many of the visitors who are attracted here by publicity eventually decide to settle down on the Island, and that, too, others come here again and again for their holidays, and their friends of what it is attracts them. So the circle of publicity is an ever-widening one, and because through the Publicity Bureau, it has been so well maintained and so ably handled, the citizens owe the organization a debt of gratitude, and for that reason it will continue to command their staunch support.

It is a hopeful sign of the times that people in such large numbers have again been on the move during the holiday months. It means that there is more money available for recreational purposes, and there is every evidence that it is being spent freely. That leads to greater sums in circulation, and the benefit of this is felt in all quarters. When this is the case, the tourist industry enjoys expansion, and those cities and localities that have attractions to offer and have steadily advertised their place in the sun are those that benefit the most. This locality must have benefited during the present Summer to a greater degree, proportionate to the population, than perhaps any other place in the Dominion, and much of the credit goes to the publicity work that has been done. Victoria has experienced the wisdom of the slogan that "it pays to advertise," and intends to keep on building up her share in the tourist industry.

EXEMPTION ODDITIES

People of this country who visit the United States are finding that there are a good many catches in the provision that allows them to bring back goods up to the value of $100 free of duty. It is not a blanket provision, and has many irksome exceptions which create trouble and about which the Government has made no attempt to give out such information that travelers may know of them in advance. What is the reason for regulations that seem on the face of them to be absurd has never been explained.

A radio for a motor car, if valued at less than $100, may be brought in duty free, but it cannot be brought in installed in the owner's car; it must be carried as luggage. If it is installed while the visitor is in the United States, then it becomes dutiable on his return to Canada. The same applies to a clock, or any other extra for the car. When clothing and boots are purchased they are only free if carried as luggage, and dutiable if worn. A purchaser of a tire must carry it as luggage if it is to escape duty. If it is on the wheel of his car, or even if carried as a spare, the duty must be paid.

The regulation which covers the foregoing is that "the exemption granted shall be limited to goods actually accompanying a returning resident of Canada and brought in by him as baggage at the time exemption is claimed, and shall not be granted to any person under the age of fourteen years." That means goods must actually accompany the tourist. It is also provided that "returning residents must state in their declaration in Canadian currency the price actually paid for all goods purchased abroad in respect of which exemption is claimed, and must state a fair market value for all goods obtained abroad other than by purchase, such as gifts. The purchase price or value stated is not necessarily the value for duty, but must be declared in order to assist the appraising officer in arriving at the correct value for duty. To facilitate appraisal, invoices or sales slips should be presented wherever possible." The exemption from duty can only be claimed by any one person, three times a year. There is a provision that four months must elapse between one exemption and another for the same individual.

MEDICAL RESEARCH IN CANADA

Somewhat encouraging results are being obtained by Canadian medical men in research treatment of diabetes and cancer. Dr. Scott, of the Connaught Laboratories, Toronto, as reported in the current issue of The Canadian Medical Association Journal, has found that the addition of insulin increases the sensitivity of diabetics to that standard remedy. A remarkable case is given of a five-year-old girl in the last stages of diabetes who was much relieved within twenty-four hours. In ordinary cases it was found that one injection daily of the new preparation was sufficient, as compared with three of the present formula given.

A survey of the clinical treatment of cancer by "enrol" that has been carried on by the Hendry Research Foundation at Kingston, Ont., is encouraging, if only in a guarded way. Enrol is a biological substance discovered by Dr. H. C. Connett, that appears to arrest the growth of cancer in the human body. During the past year the treatment has been carried out on 382 cases, all of them far advanced in the progress of the disease, and most of them having received all that could be done by surgery, X-ray and radium. In most cases some important changes took place in the patient. Enrol is found to palliate pain and render fatal termination less distressing. When used before an operation it tends to reduce the size of the growth and to soften it. The guarded conclusion is handed out that "it is premature to state how valuable enrol will become as a therapeutic agent in cancer." The report is one of the many evidences of the relentless search for remedies that will palliate and possibly cure this devastating disease. Meantime medical authorities stress the fairly satisfactory results obtained in earlier cases by means of surgery, X-ray and radium.

LITERARY PILGRIMAGES

A recently-issued appeal for funds to renovate Milton's cottage at Chalfont, St. Giles, in Buckinghamshire, points out that people fumbling 7,500, from all parts of the world, visited the cottage last year. From this cottage was issued "Paradise Lost," and there it is said, "Paradise Regained" was begun. Notable as these great poems are, few beside students read the former, while the latter is much more neglected. Milton made a deep mark upon his time; and his eloquent prose writing, "Aeopagitica," is a matchless defense of the liberty of the press. Very many more make the pilgrimage to Stratford-on-Avon to honor one greater than Milton. The broad humanity, philosophic insight, and dramatic skill of Shakespeare make his plays perennial. He belongs to all time even to this. The eloquent movie audience finds delight in his "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The pilgrimages northward find their way to the sacred spots of Scott and Burns. Sir Walter will always be beloved because of his noble romances, and the story of his heroic struggle to pay his debts will forever remain as one of the great epics of honor. Of him who is pre-eminently the bard of Scotland, it can be safely recorded that admiration for Robert Burns seems not to lessen with the years. In a uniquely appealing way he has voiced the emotions of the common man. What the English Queen felt concerning Calais may be said of Burns and all Scottish folk. He is written on their hearts. Whether, a century or a century and a half hence, or three centuries from now, the erstwhile haunts of Kipling and Shaw will magnetize the feet of the thousands, let their respective admirers prognosticate. It is given to history alone to write the actual record.

Operations under the Alberta Credit House Act are to be above the courts. In other words, when anyone is despoiled he will have no recourse to the law. The excuse given for this high-handed legislation is that the validity of the covenants might be destroyed by "mischievous legislation" before the experiment could be made effective. Moreover, the covenanters are deprived of recourse to the courts against one another or against the Credit House. It is the arbitrary rule of the Credit House that will hold sway.

In its experiment to launch Social Credit, the Government is given power by the Legislature to make drastic changes in regulations without warning, or, in other words, where the doctrine is concerned, there will be government by order-in-council. That power is now extended to the economic life of the people of Alberta, and it is an dangerous a precedent as has been created in this country for a long time. Seemingly, Premier Aberhart is moving in the direction of dictatorship. One of his definite steps is in depriving the people of the protection of the courts where the Social Credit experiment is concerned. The Social Crediters received no mandate in this respect in last year's election.

Moreover, the covenanters are deprived of recourse to the courts against one another or against the Credit House. It is the arbitrary rule of the Credit House that will hold sway.

In its experiment to launch Social Credit, the Government is given power by the Legislature to make drastic changes in regulations without warning, or, in other words, where the doctrine is concerned, there will be government by order-in-council. That power is now extended to the economic life of the people of Alberta, and it is an dangerous a precedent as has been created in this country for a long time. Seemingly, Premier Aberhart is moving in the direction of dictatorship. One of his definite steps is in depriving the people of the protection of the courts where the Social Credit experiment is concerned. The Social Crediters received no mandate in this respect in last year's election.

Operations under the Alberta Credit House Act are to be above the courts. In other words, when anyone is despoiled he will have no recourse to the law. The excuse given for this high-handed legislation is that the validity of the covenants might be destroyed by "mischievous legislation" before the experiment could be made effective. Moreover, the covenanters are deprived of recourse to the courts against one another or against the Credit House. It is the arbitrary rule of the Credit House that will hold sway.

New Postage Stamp Design Criticized

HERE is the first issue of British postage stamps to bear the picture of King Edward VIII. Many critics have been voiced of the design, which is said in many quarters to be too severe and modern. British post office officials hint the issue may soon be withdrawn. Canada's new issue is due at the first of the year.

In preparation for the Saturday opening, the Browning Amusement Company is now installing its concessions, which will include miniature rides for the tiny tots, merry-go-round, fairground games, gondola, seaplane and whip. Among the shows Mr. Browning has brought to Victoria are the Western show, which features a cowboy in demonstrations of knife throwing, whip-cracking and rope-handling; an arcade, an athletic show and a funhouse.

ATHLETIC SHOW
The athletic show being brought here is under the direction of J. R. Ryan, widely-known athlete, coach in Oregon, and includes a wrestling show in which the wrestlers will meet all-comers. Police Gazette rules will be used.

Following the example set last year, Mr. Browning said that on Saturday a bomb will be set off and the youngsters returning to the exhibition office, the Canadian entered and parachutes which the bomb will release will receive a ticket entitling them to passes through the entire midway.

SPACE SOLD OUT
All exhibition space has been sold out during the past few weeks. W. H. Mearns, secretary, announced. All exhibits and entries will be in place in time for the Saturday opening, with the exception of the Main Building, housing floral and product exhibits which might suffer from the week-end lay-over. The building, however, will be in readiness for the opening on Monday. Horse racing will start on Saturday afternoon.

This is the second time the fair association has operated its fair for seven full days and it is expected that with the opening on Saturday more children will be attracted to the grounds, thus offsetting the fact that the exhibition is not held during the annual Summer holidays. It is expected a school holiday will be declared during exhibition week, so that a new attendance record should be set.

Annual Revue of Russian Ballet Group to Be Presented During Autumn Season

The Russian Ballet School enters its fourteenth year with the opening of the Autumn term, which starts today. The annual revue will be presented this term instead of last, owing to the fact that the Coppelia Ballet was in rehearsal during that time. Preparations for the new show will start immediately.

Dramatic classes under the supervision of Vivienne Combe will re-open September 12. In these classes students will be prepared for plays to enter the drama festival, and coached for the elocution classes in the musical festival.

All students from both dancing and drama classes will have the opportunity of appearing in the Christmas Pantomime, which has been held successfully for two seasons.

DIED AT NANAIMO

NANAIMO, Sept. 8.—Reginald Boorman, 12-year-old son of Arthur Boorman and the late Mrs. Boorman, of Dashwood, Vancouver Island, died in Nanaimo Hospital today following a brief illness.

Besides his father he is survived by one sister, Irene, and his grandmother, Mrs. Emily Boorman. The funeral takes place on Thursday at 2 p.m. from Chapman's Funeral Home, Interment to be in the family plot, Nanaimo Cemetery.

ORE CARRIERS IN COLLISION

Cornell and Crete Proceeding Under Own Power Following Crash

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 8 (AP)—Coast guard headquarters reported today the 7,000-ton ore carriers Cornell and the Crete were proceeding under their own power to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., after colliding in Lake Superior, forty miles off Whitefish Point.

Captain Wayne Pringle, of the steamer Urchin, of Duluth, informed the coast guard by radio that his vessel was standing by the Crete in a dense fog. A large vessel owned by the Pittsburgh Company, but otherwise unidentified, in his message, stood by the Cornell, which had a gaping hole in its side. Radio messages did not describe the extent of the damage to the Crete.

The Cornell is owned by the Pittsburgh Company, of Wilmington, Del., the Crete, also an ore carrier of 4,800 gross tons, is owned by the Intramiles Company, likewise of Wilmington.

Three automobile accidents resulting in injuries to two persons, occurred over the Labor Day weekend, police reports show.

Thirteen-year-old Margaret Buck, of Esquimalt, was killed and bracketed to hospital Monday night when a car driven by W. G. Buckingham, 1238 Esquimalt Road, was in collision with an automobile operated by Harry Yates, of Port Alberni, near the Six-Mile Hill on the Island Highway.

Yates was charged in the Provincial Police Court with driving a car too fast, and was fined $10. The court also imposed a $10 fine on the Esquimalt driver.

A wrenched back was suffered by Alex Dick, a passenger in a car driven by Jack Blake, 628 John Street, when the machine was in collision Saturday night at Government and Discovery Streets, with an automobile operated by Walter Matthews, 1122 Chamber Street.

Driver M. C. Moore, of Government Street, escaped serious injuries when his automobile crashed into a telephone pole and turned over on Fort Street, near Linden Avenue, early Sunday morning. The car was extensively damaged.

DRIVER CHARGED

Hugh Ogood, Bremerton Road, alleged driver of the roadster, who was also injured, is charged with manslaughter. He appeared in Esquimalt police court yesterday and was remanded until Monday, September 14. Bail was set at $5,000 in sureties of $2,500 each, which police said, were furnished by H. W. Davey, barrister, appeared for Ogood.

DR. GOOD MORNING

Thompson, Bremerton, said:

"I did not see Chief Crapper until 6 o'clock on Monday morning and the effect of anything he might have had would have worn off by that time. However, from the condition of his eyes there was a suggestion of evidence that he might have had some drugs."

Social Activities and Notes of Personal Interest

First United Church Scene Of Ceremony

A pretty wedding was solemnized recently at First United Church. Rev. E. F. Church officiating, of Dorothy, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Campbell, McKenzie Avenue, and Mr. Edwin Robinson, only son of Mr. E. Robinson, Douglas Street, and the late Mr. Robinson.

The bride was beautifully decorated with Autumn flowers on the girl friends of the bride—under the direction of her father, the bride and groom standing beneath a floral arch, from which a wedding bell was suspended.

LOVELY BRIDE

As the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, Mr. G. H. Peaker played the "Bridal Chorus." The bride made a lovely picture in her gown of white silk lace over satin, fashioned with a floor length skirt, flaring into a train at the back. The bodice was high-necked and was fastened down the back with satin buttons, the full sleeves fitting into long, tight cuffs pointed over the hands. Her veil of silk embroidered net was arranged with a halo of orange blossoms and seed pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of pale yellow roses, white carnations and waxanum.

HER ATTENDANTS

She was attended by Miss Carla Ellis as maid of honor, and friends in pale blue organza, which had a matching jacket and Miss Irene Campbell, her sister, as bridesmaid, in a flock of yellow organza. They both wore matching hats of straw and mohair, and carried arm bouquets of shaded pink and yellow and orange giant zinnias, respectively.

Mrs. E. L. Knowlton, the bride's sister, assisted in receiving the bride, the bride traveling in a flock of roses, pink, white, smocked in French blue silk. She wore a matching bonnet of dotted net, trimmed with French blue flowers, and carried a Colonial bouquet of pink carnations and swansonia, tied with blue ribbons. Mr. Leslie Gill supported the groom, and the ushers were Mr. Alfred Blance and Mr. William Mawle.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. M. Carver sang "Still is the Night," accompanied by Mr. Peaker on the organ.

AT HAMPTON HALL

A reception was held after the ceremony at Hampton Hall in a floral setting of palms, tinted plants and Autumn flowers. The guests were welcomed by the bride's mother in a gown of navy blue crepe with a yoke and long full cut velvet and a cowl neckline. She wore a navy felt hat and a corsage bouquet of salmon pink gladioli.

The supper-table was covered with a lace cloth and centred with a three-tier wedding cake with lighted tapers at either end. The

During the reception Mr. McNair Paterson sang "Just A'weary in You" and "Out of the Dawn" as a solo, accompanied by Mr. William Haley.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson left at midnight for Victoria, and the bride and the bride traveling in a flock of roses, pink, white, smocked in French blue silk. She wore a matching bonnet of dotted net, trimmed with French blue flowers, and carried a Colonial bouquet of pink carnations and swansonia, tied with blue ribbons. Mr. Leslie Gill supported the groom, and the ushers were Mr. Alfred Blance and Mr. William Mawle.

Among the beautiful gifts was a standard lamp from the bride's former associates at the Metropolitan Store.

CHAPTER XXIII

Joan's face reflected her deep anxiety.

"You had one idea when you came out here on the beach to meet me . . . maybe it was the right one," she said. "You were going away."

"My stuff's packed," Deeds said slowly.

"I think you're going to last it on the lamp?" Joan attempted to smile as she used the phrase Deeds had employed in telling of Sloan Eddige's "suggestion" that Deeds remain for ten days, but her lips quivered.

"I think you know the answer. I'll stick as long as you want me or think you need me."

"Even if I can't promise you . . . anything?"

"Yes. I'm dumb enough to . . . He broke off his sentence and stretched himself out on his back in the sand. With his hands clasped under his head, he lay looking up at the sky as if he had not a care in the world. "Take it easy," he caressed Joan in a quiet voice.

"Those two hours are coming up the beach now. When the two Eddiges neared the pair on the sands, Joan was staring listlessly at the ocean and Deeds lay in his relaxed position.

beside her. There was nothing to indicate that they were engaged in a conversation of any interest. Deeds did not lift his head until Joan called a careless greeting to the newcomers.

"Blowing yourselves?" John asked amiably. "I said nothing."

"Just being plain lazy," Deeds suggested, propping himself on one elbow. It was queer how different he felt now . . . didn't give a tinker's damn for either of these birds. Not with Joan here and . . . trusting him.

"I regret to be the bearer of bad news," John continued suavely. "We have a message for you, Miss Joan. Your father asked if we happened to see you on your travels to tell you that he would like to see you at the house, when was convenient."

"Oh, thank you. We were just about to start back."

"We're taking a constitutional down as far as the inlet." Sloan observed. "Perhaps Mr. McCune would like to go with us . . . a poor substitute for your company, Miss Kendall, I know."

Deeds was conscious that Joan gave an apprehensive start and spoke quickly, fearing that she might betray herself.

"Why thanks," he drawled. "As a matter of fact, I was just suggesting we start home . . . have a little job to do in the village. After all . . . You'd better change your mind and come along. Brothers are notoriously poor company," Sloan spoke easily, but Deeds was quick to attach a meaning to his quiet insistence. Joan held her breath, until reassured by a quiet chuckle from her companion.

"You two gentlemen can have much better company than mine," he told them. "Here comes the dominie. He's an enthusiastic hiker."

Deeds jerked his head in the direction of the Rev. Mr. Beckham who was walking rapidly along the hard sand. He was hatless and coatless. The four watched his approach in silence.

"What's this? A meeting?" he called out, about the pair.

"You're just in time," Deeds told him smilingly, rising to his feet and giving Joan a hand. "The doctors are all set for a walk down to the inlet. But Miss Kendall has to go . . . and so do I. I was just telling Dr. Sloan that he was lucky to have you come along just now."

"I would be glad to," the minister said earnestly. "In fact, I was bound that way."

"Then we won't keep you," Deeds grinned. He might be inviting trouble for himself later, but he was getting a kick out of putting one over on Sloan Eddige. The whole thing looked like a trick, anyway.

"Shall we start along?" he asked Joan, complacently.

"I do like her. But I love you."

"Are you sure, Mac?"

"When they reached the cottage, Mr. and Mrs. Kendall were the sole occupants of the front porch. It was unusual to see the housewife relaxing in public that Deeds found himself wondering suddenly if the message for Joan were genuine after all. Perhaps something had happened.

Prompted by a pardonable curiosity, he dropped into a chair beside Mrs. Kendall and wiped his face with his handkerchief. Joan leaned against the porch rail nearby.

"It would be unbearably warm, if I served idly."

"Don't notice much breeze in the kitchen," her mother replied shortly.

"The electric fan's broken. I guess it will stay that way."

At this information, Jere picked up a magazine that lay in his lap and commenced turning over the pages.

"I'm a sort of jack-of-all-trades, Mrs. Kendall," Deeds volunteered.

"If your fan is not too badly damaged, perhaps I could get it running again."

"I think Goss went away again today," Joan's hand had reverted to their major problem.

"He did. Claire told me so at breakfast . . . no lunch. I'm all mixed up on the time. She accused the two of us of going on a bender.

Deeds decided.

Joan's glance told him that she was thinking the same thing. She was a little nod and disappeared like a ghost. In the distance, for the sound of Jere's voice, but heard nothing. If there was a conference, it was not to be in the lobby.

He kept a solitary vigil on the porch until the appearance of the Doughtery sisters and Miss Anderson, all three in fresh gowns and armed with their fancy-work. They withdrew to a far corner and indulged in low-toned conversation as they plied their needles.

The next arrivals were the Eddiges and Rev. Mr. Beckham returning from their walk. Deeds watched them with entire unconcern and was not surprised when the doctors passed him without a word. Beckham, however, smiled and helped himself to the chair Mrs. Kendall had vacated.

"I'm going to enjoy the breeze a few moments," he told Deeds. "It's rather warm walking in the sun."

"Did you go all the way to the inns?"

"Oh, yes. Just a nice distance. I often make it."

"How did you find our patient?" Deeds inquired with a straight face.

"You mentioned something about wanting to have a chance to talk to him. I thought maybe you were getting it today."

"Yes and . . . no. Doctor Sloan appeared to be in an ill humor. His brother was . . . to be tactful, too . . . for . . . Miss Kendall noticed this before I joined you. I . . . I rather hoped they would not be impolite in Miss Kendall's presence.

last night. Do I look the way I feel?"

"I don't know how you feel. Mac, do you think that Claire knows anything?"

"Not why?" Deeds said, "It's so nice that she's . . . afraid. She's gone out on her way to be with me and . . . well, I didn't know just what to think. I never have been getting the best of me."

"She merely wants to be friends . . . told me so. She also rather went out of her way to tell me that Gene was an odd sort. Must I do something to conceal his amusements?"

"Now, I'm sorry," Beckham looked thoroughly uncomfortable. "I shall be forced to explain . . . and I'm afraid it will sound as though I had succumbed to a famous Summer resort failing. I received the impression from my son. Quite innocent on his part, I am sure."

"I do like her. But I love you."

A very charming young woman.

"I didn't notice anything out of the way. Deeds assured him. "But we have been talking only a few minutes."

"Perhaps I am not as serious as I thought," the minister mused. "But my lost sheep did not appear to be in a receptive mood. I sometimes fear that I am taking my vacation rather too wholeheartedly."

"She added with a whimsical smile. "And that reminds me. I was sorry to receive a suggestion that you might be quitting us."

"I do like her. But I love you."

Ranking American Professionals Test Toronto Course but Fail to Break Par—Gene Kunes Is Defending Champion—Close to 200 Will Face Starter—Scoring Good in Practice

By RALPH DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer
TORONTO, Sept. 8 (CP)—Young St. Andrew's, proving itself a man-sized golf course in the face of preliminary firing for the Canadian Open—championship that opens Thursday, won the respect of the visiting shotmakers today. Its par of 70 was unbroken by a big platoon of United States and home players who seek the title held by Gene Kunes, of Morristown, Pa.

"My goodness, this is a long course, considering it measures only 6,925 yards," complained Alvin Byron, 60, of New Jersey, a native of Ridgewood, N.J., as he finished exploring the hills and valleys of the public course in company with Victor Ghezzi, Deal, N.J., runner-up to Kunes last year at Summerland, Montreal.

"They've stretched the yardstick on a few holes, all right," conceded Ghezzi, "and the fairways are a little hard and bumpy. I figure this is a tougher course than Summerland. It took 200 to win there, and I doubt if anyone will get that score."

Yet Ghezzi scored an approximate 72 on his first tour, playing two and three extra holes to nearly every hole, to find the range of various distances. In the event of brilliant putting on surfaces that bothered his partner, Nelson, carded 75.

CUMMING HAD

It remained for Canadian pro, clubby Lou Cumming, of Toronto, to send up the most impressive preliminary fireworks. Cumming chipped thirty-six feet from the edge of the eighteenth green into the cup and that made his score par 70. He played in company with Dick Metz, of Chicago; Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., and Horton Smith, of Chicago.

WHITE SOX IN SECOND PLACE IN AMERICAN

Defeat—Detroit Tigers in Only Major League Game To Move Up

AMERICAN LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP)—The White Sox took over sole possession of second place and eliminated the Detroit Tigers' last mathematical chance at the American League pennant by trouncing the ex-world champions, 7 to 5, in the only major league game of the day.

BUDGE ADVANCES BUT FAILS TO IMPRESS FANS

Defeats Smith in Four-Set Fixture in U.S. Tournament

Red-Headed Californian Moves Into Next Round By Victory Over Former Canadian Tennis Champion—Last of Canadians Eliminated—Perry Displays Sensational Form

By BOB CAVAGNARO
Associated Press Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—Don Budge, the younger American, is counting on to beat England's Fred Perry and keep the United States tennis title in its native heath, showed signs of staleness from months of uninterrupted campaigning as he won the hard way from a second-set opponent.

As the lanky California red-head took the measure of Gene Rice of Berkeley, Cal., it seemed Budge will have to sweat out of it to reach the final and ultimately what is expected to be a championship match with the peerless Briton. The scores of Budge's victory were 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

LAST CANADIAN LOSSES

The last Canadian challenge was squelched during a stifling hot day. Jean Burritt, Toronto, could quickly be beaten in a third-round match by Helen Petersen, of Stamford, Conn. The American girl's shots were too temper for the Canadian veteran, and she won by 6-1, 6-2.

Helen Hull Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., striving to become the first player to win the women's crown after six years running, still rates a favorite to repeat. She had no difficulty disposing of Virginia Rice Johnson, of Boston, 6-0, 6-4, gaining the round of eight in which she will meet Gussie Raegner, San Francisco player.

Others to progress in the women's division were Dorothy May Sutton Bundy, of Santa Monica, Cal.; Alice Marble, of San Francisco, and Gracy Wheeler, of Santa Monica.

YOUNGSTER ADVANCES

Little Miss Bundy, who crushed the seeded Sarah Palfrey Fabian in the first round, advanced at the expense of Edith Moore, of Montclair, N.J., 6-2, 6-0. Miss Marble beat Katherine Winthrop, of Boston, 8-6, 6-3, and Miss Wheeler eliminated Dorothy Andrus, of New York, 6-4, 6-3.

John McDiamond, Princeton, N.J., defeated Yvon Peira, France, 6-1, 8-3, 8-6 to advance to the men's tournament more completely than ever.

"He would have beaten anybody in the world," said Ellsworth Vines, the professional star, after the match. Perry agreed it was one of the best days of his career. He made short work of sheer speed that probably no one else in the game could have reached.

"He hit the corners at top speed was simply unbelievable."

Perry's next opponent is Henry M. Culley, Santa Barbara, Cal., who eliminated last year's runner-up, Sidney B. Wood, Jr., 6-4, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3, in the upset of the Labor Day programme.

SOLD TO GIANTS

BALTIMORE, Sept. 8 (AP)—John Oordan, general manager of the Baltimore Orioles of the International League, announced today the club had sold First Baseman Les Powers to the New York Giants in a straight cash transaction.

SALTSpring IN GOLF VICTORY

Playing on their home course, Saltspring Island golfers captured the J. J. White Trophy from the visiting Ardmore Club over the week-end, by winning the second half of the annual inter-club fixture with a 9-3 score. Ardmore won the first half of the North Saanich Islands 7-3, but could not hold the Islanders at Saltspring, and the honours went to the home aggregation by a four-point margin for the two matches.

Stock and Bond Prices Higher at New York Mart

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (P) — Business hopes brightened in today's stock market and a wide assortment of leaders pushed into new high territory for the past five years or longer with gains of fractions to 3 or more points.

Buying orders piled up over the week-end and for a while in the first hour the ticket tape was pressed to the floor with floor transactions.

With Labor Day out of the way, traders appeared to be reinvigorated by signs of a brisk fall expansion in industry.

There were several profit-taking intervals when the pace slowed appreciably, but the list as a whole shook off realizing without any great difficulty. While there were a number of losers at the finish, and some extreme gains were shaded, the more prominent stocks held around their best levels of the day.

Stocks took command at the start, but the motors, oils, rails, copper and specialties were quiet to step well up in the front rank.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues was ahead 3 of a point at 69.2. The rails, up 4, established a peak for the day. Transfers totaled 17,600 shares, the largest day's volume since June 29.

Railroad issues provided a firm underpin for the listed firms, market.

For the third successive session twenty rail issues broke through to a new 1936 peak at 95; up 1 of a point to balance.

In the foreign list Italian and Polish issues improved.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THE PRIZE "RING"
It is curious how the obvious is so frequently accepted without thought—even when it appears to contradict the evidence of one's own senses.

How many of those who attend boxing and wrestling bouts for example ever stop to question why the space in which the contestants engage is called the "ring"—when the plain fact is that the enclosure is not a circle but a square?

The phrase is an interesting survival of olden times when prize-fighting and wrestling were conducted within a space defined by the bystanders.

These, of course, would gather in and form what might roughly be described as a circle, from which we have only the allusion to the ring, but also the expression in the game connected "to make a ring."

MAN OR GOAT

It happened in the Ballymena hiring fair. An aged farmer accosted a red-faced youth if he would hire.

"Certainly," said the youth. "What for?" said the farmer.

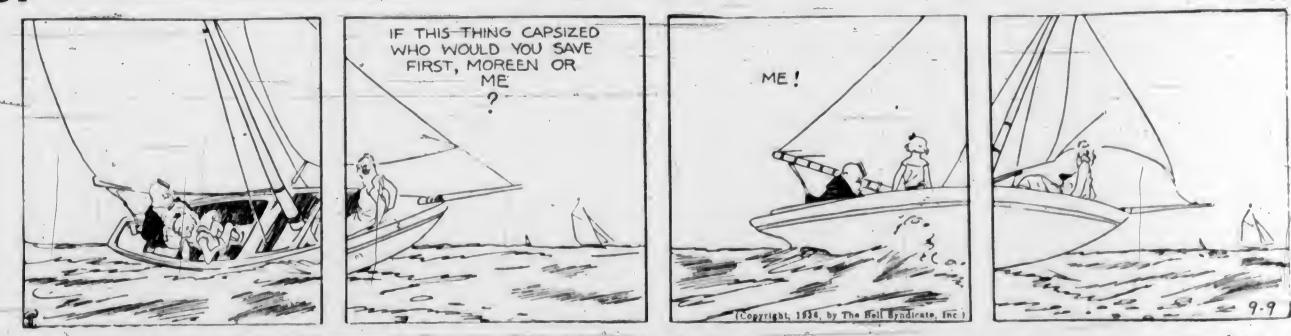

"Fifteen pounds," echoed the farmer, "and not a hair on your face."

"Well," said the boy, "if it's hair that's going to do your work, buy a goat."

"He looked so stupid when he proposed to me."

"Well, my dear, look what a stupid thing he was doing!"

Jane Dixon Says:

TODAY'S PROBLEMS: THE YOUNG WOMAN WHO CAN'T CHOOSE BETWEEN TWO SUITORS, AND THE WOMAN WHOSE FIANCÉ HAS THIRICE DRIFTED INTO INDIFFERENCE

The route that leads to the marriage altar is often so devious that the wonder is anyone ever undertakes to travel it.

But just as hope springs eternal in the human breast, so the vision of a vine-covered cottage or a cosy flat with the right one leads the fuddled traveler over the rough places in the love route straight to the preacher's doorstep.

Dear Miss Dixon: There are two young men in my life. Both of them have expressed the wish to marry me.

I admire and respect "A" am contented to be with him, proud to be seen in his company. He does dominate just a little.

An entirely different chord in me is struck by "B". When I am with him I can tease and have fun; in other words, twist him around my little finger.

SHE CAN'T DECIDE

I don't know which I care for more. I'm supposed to be going with "A", but I can see him only week-ends because of his work. That leaves me with five nights a week open. On these nights "B" comes to see me, but can't afford to take me out. When he doesn't call I get terribly lonesome.

This can't go on very much longer. I must choose between the two. Which shall it be?—E.A.

Answer: If you can't choose between the two suitors because you don't know which is the one, you had better choose neither, for your affection lacks both depth and durability.

Certainly you are not truly in love with "A". A woman in love does not have to be entertained by other men or another man when the one is absent. If she is lonely it is for the one, and no substitute will suffice.

May be you can find fun in twisting a man around your little finger. That makes you different, for very few regular women enjoy that sort of entertainment.

Better not go steadily with either until you know which, if either, is necessary to your happiness.

NOT A PROMISING FIANCÉ

Heart Broken: You've had one unhappy love experience, and unless you find a firm stand with your present fiance it is not only possible but probable, that you will have another.

The young man pursued you. He tried to sweep you off your feet. You were cautious about accepting his attentions, but after a time he seemed so good and kind that you learned to love him.

His interest in you has drifted into indifference. He goes with other girls and tells you about how much he enjoys the adventure. This, despite the fact he is engaged to you. You've exchanged mutual vows of love and of loyalty.

What kind of a husband do you figure such a Lohario would make? A kind husband? A considerate husband? Be honest with yourself, my dear Heart Broken. And if you are honest with yourself you'll admit that a gallivanting fiance is the father of a faithless husband.

This man wants you and he wants his freedom, too. Tell him he can't want both and mean business. If he doesn't calm down and behave with fairness and justice and decency, get out of his range and stay out. You'll save yourself time, pain and effort by insisting on a decision now.
